"WHAT-A-MAN" GONE FROM LOVE NEST

Rev. Hudson's Erstwhile Bride Signs Application for Wedding Annulment

By MOTHER KENNEDY-HUDSON

Los Angeles, July 17 (US)—Marriage is in the heart—the most delicate, tender, thrilling of life's varied experiences. To me it has come in an unexpected moment and mode. The public has been informed (and mainly formed) of various and sundry aspects of my love-union with Mr. Hudson.

But this is cold-methodical, while love is spontaneous and knows no "proximity."

Before this reaches you, dear friends, I will have signed with a drop of my own blood the application for annulment of my wonderful marriage in the State of California.

Why am I doing it when I know him to be absolutely true to me? Why all this? Because, as an evangelist, I will observe to the "thighs" the most rigid technicalities of the laws of God and man.

LAUDS HUSBAND
There is no man more sincere, understanding, and Mr. Hudson, the instant he learned through the press of my somewhat claiming his name, took the very noble, manly stand of separating from me rather than allow a shadow in taint to my reputation or our marriage relationship.

For my part, I would never say "separate," for my heart has been welded in the sunlight of love and the furnace of agony, but I know he is right and I am submitting.

As I write, my whole body is aching in a numb, but one thought consoles me—the heart of my husband rests safely in me.

HOVER ORDERS DAWES BACK TO LONDON

figure of $200,000,000 as that of the loan projected under the French plan.

FRANCE IS BALKY

In commenting, in response to questions by newspapermen, on the proposed Premier's conference Monday, Castele said the American government had no reason to believe that the meeting would not be held.

A dispatch from Paris, however, said France had not accepted the London invitation and would not do so until agreement with the German leaders themselves, in Paris, was effected.

President Hoover also today formally instructed Secretary Stimson to confine active American participation in the London conference to economic issues.

These instructions were cable to the secretary in Paris before Stimson left for London today. They followed a series of transatlantic telephone conversations between the President and Mr. Stimson.

Laval to Demand Full Showdown by Germans

Paris, July 17 (AP)—American, British and French representatives today straightened out some of the details of the plan they evolved yesterday for a $200,000,000 international loan to Germany.

They interrupted their negotiations pending the arrival tomorrow of Chancellor Brüning and Foreign Minister Curtius of Germany.

When the German representatives get here Premier Laval intends to have a frank discussion of all issues between the two nations. His intention is to lay all his cards on the table and ask the Germans to do the same.

It is planned not to call in Mr. Stimson and the British representative until the French and German problems have been thoroughly threshed out.

M. Laval is represented as believing that until there is a complete understanding between France and Germany regarding the conditions under which Germany can have financial aid, it is useless to confer with representatives of other nations.

Meanwhile France has not yet accepted the invitation to the conference of ministers at London on Monday, and it is not known if they will use the parity with the Germans.

The conference scheduled for Monday evening in London may have to be postponed, Premier Laval said tonight, because of the Franco-German negotiations here.

These announcements were made after the Premier of Germany had talked together for nearly an hour. These present at today's meeting besides Secretary Stimson and Ambassador Edgar Snodgrass of the United States were: Premier Laval and Finance Minister Paul Reynaud; French, and Foreign Minister Henderson and Ambassador Tyrell representing Great Britain.

Terms of Loan Scored by Papers in Berlin

Berlin, July 17—The Reichstag council of elders today rejected a demand by Communists and National Socialists that the Reichstag be convened in special session next week.

The ballot showed previous had been voted for 228 Reichstag members, including National Socialists, Nationalists and Communists, for the extra session. The Reichstag has 577 members and thus the necessary majority was not obtained.

DISTRUST OF FRANCE

When the famous Express du Nord rolls down to Paris tonight Chancellor Brüning and Foreign Minister Curtius will be cheered.

There is deep dissatisfaction at the proposal in connection with extension of financial aid from abroad.

This is the suggestion that administration of an international loan granted Germany be supervised by an appointee of the lending nations.

It would amount, the newspapers say, to re-establishment of the kind of agent-general for reparations which caused so much discontent under the Dawes plan, and any return to a system of foreign financial oversight would mean the certain defeat of the Brüning government.

BRÜNING WARNED

The Industrial Allgemeine Zeitung, which leans toward Adolf Hitler, even warns Brüning that not only his government, but his life will not be safe if he gives way in Paris to "French blackmail."

The Deutsche Tageszeitung is reminded of the days when Germany accepted President Wilson's fourteen points in the fond hope they were the means of a new era of world solidarity. At the other extreme the Communist press views the forthcoming parity as "the united front against Moscow."

"A second Versailles," "Germany will become a second China," "the consolidation of Germany," are some of the headlines in the nationalist press.

Simultaneously with the chancellor's departure the government decreed wholesale suppression of radical newspapers. The Angriff, organ of Adolf Hitler's Nazis, or Fascists, was suppressed for a week. Five provincial Communist papers were suppressed for one to four weeks. Hitler's "Völkischer

RED RIOTS IN 4 GERMAN CITIES

Gelsenkirchen, Germany, July 17 (AP)—A mob of Communists, entrenched in the streets throughout the night, were dispersed by police early today and 27 were arrested. Authorities said police withheld their fire rather than let blood shed.

The Communists looted stores, smashed windows and threw the town into darkness last night. Attracted by police they tore up the pavements and erected barricades from which they resisted attempts to dislodge them until dawn.

In Cologne Communists were quieted after attempting to erect barricades of paving blocks.

In Düsseldorf police were pelted with stones, but quelled a demonstration by firing on a mob.

1 DEAD, 5 SHOT, 4 'GONE' IN RACE WAR

Camp Hill, Ala., July 17 (AP)—One negro was killed and five were wounded early today as posers sought leaders of a mass meeting near here at which Gov. Miller was threatened with violence unless he released eight negroes under death sentences for an attack on two white girls near Scottsboro, last March.

Posers were organized after Sheriff Young was wounded seriously and his deputy, Jack Thompson, was slightly hurt when they sought to question Ralph Garay, a negro, who was slain by officers after he fired upon them.

Chief of Police Wilson said the five negroes, one of whom was wounded seriously, were shot in an exchange of fire with the posse.

The negroes opened fire on the posse, Wilson said, when attempts were made to force entrance into a house two miles south of here. Firing through doors and windows, the negroes sent the 15 or 20 posers scurrying for their lives. None of the posers was injured.

Chief Wilson said last night's meeting, which was held five miles south of here was the second in protest of the Scottsboro sentence.

JUDGE SCORES MOTHER OF 5 IN RUM CASE

Mrs. Anna P. Joyce, a widow, of Gold St., South Boston, who defied an appearance in court two weeks ago on liquor complaints, and left her five children, was today held in $2000 for a hearing tomorrow.

Her counsel, Atty. John Donovan, pleaded for low bail on the ground she wanted to get home to her children, but Judge William Day refused to grant it.

"The state has spent too much money in apprehending this woman," said the court.

Furthermore, I have done her many favors. She doesn't appreciate what is done for her. I am through doing her favors."

Mrs. Joyce was charged with abandonment of her children, with maintaining a disorderly house, two liquor law violations and a statutory offense.

She had been in court a number of times on liquor complaints previous to defaulting.

OCEAN FLIERS FAIL TO HOP

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., July 17 (AP)—Falling to take off on a non-stop flight to Europe as the leg of a world flight early this morning, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon altered their plans and decided to make their first stop at Harbor Grace, N. F.

The fliers announced they would stop for Harbor Grace, N. F., about midnight, and from Harbor Grace to Moscow in an attempt to lower the world-record mark of 20 days and gatty.

Pangborn and Herndon had planned to follow the summer summer route across the Atlantic, flying due east 1400 miles and then northeast to the British Isles.

They were unable to get their ship off the ground, however, with the load of fuel necessary for such a long flight and then decided to follow the great circle course with a halt for fuel at Harbor Grace.

He left a letter in which he declared he had "staked his life" in a bet on the victory of Jugoslavia and that he had to keep his word.

WOMAN DRINKS POISON, DIES

While her six children were asleep and the rest of her family absent, Mrs. Anna Rudnick, 36, drank cleaning fluid in her home, 14 Warner st., Dorchester today, police say, and died at City Hospital.

Her son Charles, 14, awoke and going downstairs, found his mother leaning against the kitchen wall.

Mrs. Rudnick told the boy what she had done and slumped to the floor unconscious.

At this moment her mother, Mrs. Frances Shabley returned from an errand and called the police.

Mrs. Rudnick died at the hospital without regaining consciousness.

The medical examiner was notified, as was her husband, Joseph Rudnick, an upholsterer. Police said the family could give no reason for Mrs. Rudnick's act.

CITY AND PORT FIGHT RATES

Both the city and the Port Authority today filed appearances in the cases pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission, in which the railroad asks a flat increase of 15 per cent in freight rates.

Richard Parkhurst, secretary of the Port Authority, announced.

Johnston R. Campbell, former chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, left for Washington to file the appearances and to watch developments.

It was pointed out by officials of the Port Authority that the eastern coast rates case will bring many substantial increases in freight rates to New England shippers and will become effective late this year.

The Port Authority is prepared to take active measures to build up the port and has outlined a program which will be started immediately.

WITNESSES TELL OF GHOST IN CHURCH

at Closely Questions Ellery Chadwick, a Leader in the Congregation, About the Beazeley Mystery

"THE MURDER OF THE CHOIR SINGER"

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

"SEE HER TONY," said Colt pointing to the girl in the photograph, "now pretty she is. Isn't she lovely—and strangely dimorphous, eh?"

"Dimorphous?" I repeated. "Doesn't that mean she has two shapes?"

"Don't you recognize her?" he asked with a mysterious smile.

I looked again. There was something familiar in that charming, good-natured face, but I could not place her.

"Once again, Tony, you see but you do not observe—the earrings," reproved Thatcher Colt.

Without a word to me he mounted the two steps, crossed the bridge and, opening the door into the rectory, called Inspector Langel.

"I have a mission of great importance for one of your men," he told the Inspector, but he low ered his voice, and I was left in the dark as to the nature of this assignment.

Returning to the study, Colt addressed Mullins:

"Now where are those people who have been trying to get in here?"

Mullins explained they were at the soda fountain at the corner of the street.

"Can you slip out and get one for yourself, Mullins?" said Colt, and as the grateful cop grinned, the Commissioner added:

"And on your way out, look around in front of the church for a finger-print man from headquarters—Williams is the name—and a few operatives from the homicide squad. I told them to meet me here and I want them to wait for me in the vestibule until I send them. Also tell the stenographer in charge out there that when Capt. Hollander of the air force arrives with a boy and a box to send them directly in here to me."

"A BASILICA CHURCH"

Mullins entered as Colt and I, passing through the study other door, found ourselves in the Church of St. Michael and All Angels.

A few minutes later, a door at the front end of the church was opened and three persons entered. My eyes, now accustomed to the poor light, recognized at once the mining, self-assured suit of Miss Emma Hinton. But I did not know the two men who followed her up the aisle. With considerable alacrity, Miss Hinton greeted Thatcher Colt, including me in a glance as she held a book before her.

"Now, Mr. Holt," she continued, "I want you to know of the leaders of our church, Mr. Ellery Chadwick."

As Colt acknowledged the introduction, Chadwick leaped at once into a vigorous defense of the church and the clergy.

The Commissioner tried to stem the tide of the vestryman's effusion, assuring him that he had the highest respect and affection for all churches and their ministers; he was here, now, only to perform his sworn duty.

While Colt listened with momentary patience, I had an opportunity to study the man. Ellery Chadwick was a short, rugged horse-faced man whose wis-aged face, voice and rather agitated bearing would lead any fair-minded observer to set him down as a self-made man. With my characteristic Thatcher Colt, who has read this manuscript, disagrees.

Standing meekly by the eloquent Mr. Chadwick, was a mild, shuffling man, even shorter than the vestryman, with a pensive and harmless air, who looked nervously at the marble pavement before the pulpit but now and then glanced in bold haste up at Thatcher Colt, looking away the next instant like an embarrassed, gray-haired little boy. Undoubtedly this was Houghton, the sexton.

"Mr. Chadwick," said Colt, suddenly interrupting the exhorting vestryman, "my business is to find out who killed these two people. Do you know anything about it?"

"I have,"

"Do you?"

"I do not."

"Did you know Beazeley well?"

"He has been my spiritual adviser for the last 15 years."

"And your friend?"

"Certainly."

"Did he ever confide in you?"

"I have."

that he was afraid of any answer.

"No."

A PROTEST

"Did you know of his intimacy with Mrs. Saunders?"

Ellery Chadwick became indignant.

"In the first place," he said, "this is hardly the place."

"Never mind that. The police know there was such a relationship. And we know about that meeting held in the study. What were the facts about that?"

Ellery Chadwick joined his arms and stood in an attitude of defiance.

"Mr. Houghton told me of the rough way he was treated at headquarters this morning—"

"Not so rough. But intimidating," inserted the sexton with an uneasy glance at Thatcher Colt.

"I admit what he said was true. I had been told the sexton was behaving in such a way as to bring discredit on the church. So I went to him openly and frankly and faced him with it."

"Have you talked with Colonel Powell?" angled Colt.

"I have."

"Perhaps you can help me," he said again, "in one other matter. I want to clear up."

"I am at your service, sir."

"There is a foolish story in the neighborhood that this church is haunted."

"What's that? Did you say haunted?"

"I did," Colt affirmed resolutely.

"Why, that's nonsense. This is one of the oldest, most conservative churches in Boston."

"Never mind! You never heard the story?"

"Never!"

Mr. Chadwick spoke with firm emphasis, and glared at Thatcher Colt defiantly. The Commissioner turned deliberately upon the sexton.

"Houghton?"

"Sir?"

"Did you hear of that silly yarn?"

"I don't believe in spirits."

Colt took a step nearer to the sexton.

"Didn't you tell the people down at Headquarters that less than six months ago some high school girls, rehearsing a Sunday school play in the basement auditorium under our feet, started the story, and lots of people in the congregation heard it this morning?"

"Correct," said the sexton. "It was the ghost that filled into the church. Read tomorrow's exciting installment."

"I have."

"Do you?"

"I do not."

"Did you know Beazeley well?"

"He has been my spiritual adviser for the last 15 years."

FOLLIES AND COUNTRY SHOW BOTH GOOD

—By Gilbert Seldes—

IN THE COURSE OF A SINGLE WEEK I saw one of the simplest and one of the most elaborate theatrical productions. I liked them both, which may indicate that I have no standards, or that both were good. The elaborate one was Mr. Ziegfeld's Follies; the simple one was produced by Lawrence Langner in a reconstructed barn on the outskirts of Westport, Conn., with the Streets of New York (first produced in 1875) as the attraction. It seems to me that both of these productions have something to say about the death of the theatre; perhaps because both are so full of the life of the theatre.

Early Follies

When I first heard of the Follies (1911 in Pittsburgh, Pa.) I was not permitted to go to see them and I may have been a little bit disappointed, about 1915, to find that the Follies were actually not a dirty show. Those were the days before official glorification—1915, was in fact, the first year of Josef Urban in the Follies and consequently the first year of a new beauty. Since that time musical shows have changed again and again, but when Mr. Ziegfeld decided to resume this series he and Gene Buck agreed that the old formula could be brought up to date.

I confess that the thing I liked best in the Follies of 1915 was something which might have been done 30 years ago—the parade of the models of about 80 attractive girls dressed as Scotch gardeners. With revues becoming smart and sophisticated, this number went right back to first principles and was extremely pleasing.

Critic Grows Old

On looking over my program I find evidence of hardening of the arteries because all the other things which strike me as the most interesting probably be called old-fashioned. Slip-stick is the oldest comedy in the world, and slip-stick properly done is never stale. The particular instance in the Follies is a hand act in which endless smiles and bull-fiddle are enmeshed with a running light goes on between the various performers. There is probably some deep psychological reason why this sort of thing is funny, but I hardly propose to find out what it is. I can take my fun without knowing why. Flax, the comedian is Jack Pearl, the most guttural and gurgling of German comedians; I recommend without reservation the scene in which Pearl, as a movie director, tries to show a bride and groom what Lothario would do.

"Low" Art

The Follies are always lavish, but they are always well arranged, they have speed and action. They fulfill their intentions perfectly. Turn from them to the average serious legitimate production and you find a certain stinging and a good deal of indecision. Very few legitimate productions and players are so sure of themselves as the directors and players of musical shows. And for one, am disinclined to forgive them their nervousness because they are serious artists.

Out in Westport

What Mr. Langner has done out in Westport is the more admirable because the pitfall was so enormous. In the first place he built a stage more comfortable than any that has been built in the entire country. But with the simplest of decorations, leaving the structure of the old barn intact, he gave his audience an actual charm. He then collected a good company, not a company of stars, but an adaptable and intelligent group of players who were actually in the theatre country. But with the simplest of decorations, leaving the structure of the old barn intact, he gave his audience an actual charm. He then collected a good company, not a company of stars, but an adaptable and intelligent group of players who were actually in the theatre country.

A Timely Play

Not all the players escaped the danger, but as a whole the play was given to us without notice. It turned out extraordinarily up-to-date. Its first two acts are in the past years of 1857 and 1857 and there is even talk of the failure of the United States Bank, which was not inserted for timeliness last week, but was actually in the script of the original. There is a line, "if this panic do not last, I shall double my fortune," which is not exactly the way the bears would have expressed it in 1929. But it is an appropriate sentiment.

The play is about a villainous banker, a virtuous son of wealth who has lost his fortune, the widow and children of the good sea captain whom the banker has robbed, and a lot of dead Victorian characters who make for comedy. It is a sort of thing which can rapidly become a bore and the remedy for boredom is rapidity. Mr. Langner's production rings along as if it were given to a first, I shall double my fortune, fire with a red flame, and a cardboard five engine. You have no time to be anything but entertained.

I am sure that it is not a mere personal practice which makes me like this play. The theatre is a place where the most perfect of the human spirit can come closest to perfection among the performers. They played the villainous daughter of the villain with an exquisite sense of the style of the play. That style is the style of the Currier and Ives lithographs and the light of the cartoon which was also popular at the time.

An Example for Others

Westport is within commuting distance of New York and contains a large artist colony. It is possible to take a party of three or four to Westport and there give what is virtually a youth production for the New York stage later on. Yet it seems to me that the theatre as a whole could do in fifty small cities with a population less than that of Westport. Not by amateur groups or parents well-to-do, but by straight professionals of the average level of a good stock company. The theatre is really a happy place for the players and for the audience and that is the reason it should be restricted to such comparatively unimportant places as New York and Chicago.

Bores

—By Gobind Lal—

"BO-AND-BO makes me tired!"

When you say this, it is almost a literal fact that you describe. There are persons that can induce fatigue in you.

So we learn now from Dr. Donald A. Laird and Charles G. Muller, psychologists of the Psychological Laboratory, College University, Hamilton, N. Y. Among a number of scientific papers published under the title of "Sleep," by John Day here, Laird and Muller have one essay on "The People Who Make Us Tired."

Here is a list of these people whose presence induces fatigue in us: The egocentric person who always tries to be in the limelight. The person who interferes with our independence, preventing us from doing what we wish to do.

The person who is too solicitous, who is always going out of his way to help somebody, usually somebody who does not need this help.

The opposite type of person who appears too helpless. He or she wants the rest of the world to wait on him or her. The lethargic fellow.

Now comes the habitual fault-finder, whose aim seems an elation in knocking down others. And to the list of the envious, the nervous and fidgety people, and the humdrum bore who insists in telling you your ear the same old stories over and over again.

Hair Dresser

Nobody talks so much about the world and its affairs.

As the suave, slender gentleman who clips and curls my hair, he tells me tales of Communists, the humdrum bore who insists in telling you your ear the same old stories over and over again.

He tells me when the heat will break. When we'll have thunder showers.

And just how long the skirts will be. And how to plant my flowers. He tells me what the smartest show.

And what the latest song. He tells me everything in life. And usually he's wrong!

No Genius at 6

—By Deems Taylor—

A FORTNIGHT AGO I had a letter from a reader of the AMERICAN, asking me to hear a child genius that he has discovered. She is a thirteen-year-old girl, who has composed a number of small pieces of music—"composed" in the sense of writing them down, but in that of picking out the melodies on the piano and retaining them in her memory, so that she can repeat them whenever she is asked to do so.

I am not going. For two reasons. The first is the purely selfish one that I dread arguments. And there would be an argument, because what would actually happen would fall so far short of what the little girl's parents and admirers would expect.

What She Would Play

The little girl would play five pieces: Straw; Doll's Lullaby; Morning Thoughts; March; and Dance of the Sprites. There would be an expectant silence, and I would then say, with the air of one who says something original and important: "That's fine. Very interesting. She certainly has talent, and should go to a good music school."

He would tell me that she is already attending a good music school, which would leave me nothing to say except, "Good. Then let's wait and see what she does ten years from now." Then the argument would begin.

No Masterpieces at Six

The other reason I am not going (and the important one, I suppose) is that I don't believe that any child of six can compose music which, considered solely upon its merits as a work of art, is worth my hearing. I may be wrong. This child may be a phenomenon unique in history, and I may be pointed out as the dunce who refused to hear her first works. Nevertheless, I shall make that chance. I would rather be lazy than right.

The child who can play the piano or violin or cello with precocious skill has at least a fighting chance of becoming a great virtuoso. Technical command of an instrument is a trying and laborious accomplishment, and if it can be achieved at an early age, so much to the good. The player has just so much more leisure to devote to his own person and an artist as well as an entertainer.

But technique, as such, in creative art is solely the artist's business, being entirely meaningless otherwise. A child of six, with all the rhythmic absolutely correct, and still not be a sonnet. A child of six might, by some stretch of the imagination, conceivably develop two themes in perfect work, but it would be a mere technical mastery, the first movement of a symphony. My might grant the technical correctness of what she produced. But it would be, "What are her themes like, and what does she do with them?"

No "Ifs" About Art

There is no such thing as a work of art that is wonderful, considering the artist's age. If it is wonderful, considering it is not a work of art. If that little girl's friends and admirers really believe that she is a genius, let them, for art's sake, never allow her to know that they think so. If she is getting good schooling—which she is—she is getting all that anyone can give her. Let them not ask publishers to print her or critics to hear her or virtuosi to play her. Let her be left alone. They might encourage her a bit, if they feel like doing so. Even that is dangerous. They cannot make her an artist; it must be left to her. They can make her miserable by arousing false hopes. On the other hand, if she is not, we shall hear about it from her, not from them.

Old houses, wherein folks have lived and died, have entities as separate of their own.

As those who "bark their shutters" roofs have grown. Some show grim faces, dark and sinister.

And some like happy little ones seem to purr of comfort to whoever comes inside.

Worn brownstones from whose changed city street. That once more faintly images befall.

Brood in the shadows and disquiet. On gay and lost romances they might tell.

But be it so, but they deem make her miserable by arousing false hopes. On the other hand, if she is not, we shall hear about it from her, not from them.

Man About Town

CHIT-CHAT

That was a funny way the item covered the Crook-Police wrestling show Wednesday morning, wasn't it? . . . Joe Price's back in town again, clear and everything.

The other night he dropped $400 in a little more than an hour at one of our oldest casinos of chance and sport. . . . Ever since last Friday night we've been wondering who those two dapper young men in the white linen suits were.

They brought up the rear of the procession of relatives that followed Jimmy Maloney as he threatened his way through the crowd at Boston Garden in the ring. . . . They snatched down beside Dan Carroll in Jimmy's corner and watched the proceedings in the ring. Then, after Jimmy had recovered from his knockout, they fell in step at the rear of Jimmy's crowd again and followed him out of the arena.

Al Tolan. The man who made the king laugh is in New Bedford visiting his mother. . . . The other day he called up and asked us to come over and see him. . . . We're hesitating a bit because we've seen the way Al handles the prima donna in his act and we're wondering what might happen to us if we spent the day fishing with him. . . . By this time a male amateur had stopped, but was not of much assistance. . . . He was apparently married and had a wife, . . . with the blithe young lady. . . . Yet he was all for walking her to the door and saying good night to her.

MAKES 5566 CHANGES IN THE BIBLE

Retired Pastor Alters Meaning of Many Long-Cherished Texts in Revising Book of Books and Makes Them Easier to Understand

Do you know that many passages in the King James version of the Bible are unintelligible to the average reader of today? . . . That it is so is no insult to the readers' intelligence, for several reasons. . . . One, for instance, is that the meaning of many English words has greatly, or even entirely, changed since the translation of the King James version. . . . Another reason, according to a distinguished Bible student, is that numerous Biblical passages are inaccurate and misleading through incorrect translation.

This conclusion was reached by the Rev. Dr. James R. Kaye. . . .

He spent a lifetime in studying various translations of the Bible, line for line and word for word. . . . After going back over the original authorities of the Scriptures, Dr. Kaye has produced a revised version which contains over 5,000 corrections. . . . You'll be surprised at some of the corrections. . . . They change the meaning of many familiar Biblical quotations. . . . The learned editor of the new Bible has even found errors in the wording of the Lord's Prayer. . . . He points out that the concluding words of the prayer, as given in the King James version, were not in the original text of the Bible.

DAILY TRUE STORY ON WINGS OF LOVE

ANNE CAME EAST TO GET A REST FROM PUBLICITY

WHEN ANNE PEARSON came East after hanging up two air records she had a double purpose.

The first was to get away from Jack Moser, a young musician, who laughingly boasted that he would eventually break down her "sales resistance" and make her Mrs. Moser. The second was to get rest from the glare of publicity.

For a few days all went well. Anne basked in obscurity, attracting only casual attention for her prettiness and charm. Then she met Victor Strong, who, by the way, had come to know her only under her self-chosen alias, Alyse Pitt. But Anne was sweet and very feminine under any name. And try as she would she could not keep her heart from beating faster whenever she was with Victor.

Also she had just learned that there was an airport a mile or two to the east of the little shore resort, but she reached never to go near it, for fear someone there might recognize her as the girl who had hung new marks in the sky of aviation.

And now Anne, Alyse, Alise, Allice, discovered through the prattling tongue of Don Winner, the little flogger who had insisted on making friends with her at the hotel, some more disconcerting facts.

While she was waiting on the porch, Don, entering a room-mock, had ventured to inform Alyse that she was a "lucky girl."

"Lucky, why?" Alyse asked in surprise.

"You're the only one to whom Victor Strong will pay the slightest attention," she was told. "Any girl would be thrilled to play around with him and she did with such little of money. He father, you know, is Marvin Pitts Brown."

Another Millionaire Lays Sings to Alyse

"So," Alyse thought to herself, "another potential millionaire. But she said nothing to Don, who chattered on until Victor's yellow roadster pulled up in front and he was led to her before jumping out and running to the porch.

"With a crisp bow to Don, Victor hurried Alyse to the car. "Let's try another beach along," he said as they headed along.

"There's a private one half a mile above here, O. well, I might as well tell you, Alyse—it belongs to my family. I've enjoyed being down here with you, but, really, I'll like to have you meet the folks—if you will."

Alyse straightened up a bit. "Oh, I'd rather not," she said finally.

"You've asked in open disappointment," he said.

"I had no idea," Alyse began, "he stopped her with a wave of the hand. "I know what you're going to say," he exclaimed. "You didn't know I was the crown prince, or something like that. But, see here, Alyse, I hate all this social stuff as much as you do. I just wanted you to know I like you for yourself alone. That's why I didn't tell you before. But, now, I've told you about you and me."

Kidnaped Boy! Alyse to the Rescue

This time Alyse interrupted sharply. "Told him what?" she demanded. "What right have you to tell anything?"

"Don't let's force him," Victor cried. "You know that I know Alyse, that—that we care a lot for each other. And now, I want you to—"

"Suppose I should tell you that you are completely deceived about me, Alyse, said. "Suppose I should tell you that you really don't know a thing about me—that my name, even, is not—"

"Stop it, stop it, Alyse, please," he begged. "I know you're ought to be the most charming girl in the universe. I know that you are going to be kind to me and that my hopes are—"

"During the argument the car had sped along, until it had reached the rustic gateway to the shore without paying for permission. Victor drove into it, leaving white ruddies. Everything else was blasted from their minds by each dramatic thing that happened along in a flash.

A small car screaming up and down the sands. Three children were crying with fright. Victor stopped the machine, jumped out, ran along the beach.

MYSTERY DEATH OF BOSON WOMAN PROBED

POLICE SEARCH FOR KIN OF MRS. NIXON

Wife of Salesman Is Buried in Potter's Field; Was Found Badly Bruised in Hotel

Boston police were today seeking relatives of Mrs. Marcella Nixon, 28, of this city, whose death in New York under mysterious circumstances is being investigated.

The wife of William Nixon, a rugged appearance salesman, died in Manhattan State Hospital, July 1, and was buried in Potter's field, after her body had been unclaimed nearly two weeks.

According to the records, Mrs. Nixon was removed from Hotel Taft to the Bellevue Hospital on July 1. She was described as suffering from dementia praecox and had contusions and bruises on her face, arms and legs.

She was adjudged insane and was transferred to Manhattan State Hospital, June 26. Her death there was ascribed to acute tonsillitis and inflammation of the heart.

Acting Medical Examiner Thomas A. Connelley said he had been asked to investigate the death by a sister of the dead woman. He admitted he had no evidence of the cause being anything but a natural death.

MAN HUNTED AS DEAD; IN COURT

Two Boston men arraigned on drunkenness charges after one of them, vanishing from a bridge over Black's creek, caused a police search of the river and a traffic tie-up, were placed on three months probation in Quincy court today.

The men are Alvin Dickie, of Boston, and Carl Lewis, of Dorchester, both 28, of Huntington ave., Boston.

The two men, with two girl companions, parked their car at Southbury, Conn., on the Brockton Brook. Dickie, police say, got out and disappeared from sight on the small bridge.

Then while the police were using grappling hooks in the water, Dickie appeared from hiding at the other end of the bridge, smiling gaily.

Race for Life Alyse Holds Up Thugs

"They're stolen my little brother," he said. "They tried it once before in the city. We never expected such an attempt out here. I don't know what to do. My boat isn't here yet. It's ten miles to the nearest Coast Guard station. They're probably expecting to meet a launch at Duck Island and get away on that."

His face paled as he looked helplessly at Alyse.

In a moment she was all action.

"Get me to the airfield as quick as you can," she commanded. "Victor looked at her in amazement, but she shook his arm impatiently. "We'll catch them," she declared. "Have you got a gun?"

"No," he said at the bungalow, said Victor in a dazed way.

"There's a private one half a mile above here, O. well, I might as well tell you, Alyse—it belongs to my family. I've enjoyed being down here with you, but, really, I'll like to have you meet the folks—if you will."

DIVORCES FREE 2 SISTERS

AID OF SISTER WINS 'ABUSED' WIFE DIVORCE

Reciprocates Like Assistance in Previous Case; Bares Alleged 'Crucities'

One sister testified for another in Suffolk Probate Court today, enabling her to win a divorce case, and reciprocating for a similar service of a few months ago, before the same court.

Mrs. Mildred Corbin McCarthy, 24, of 247 Forest Hills st., Jamaica Plain, was granted a decree nisi from John J. McCarthy, corroborating testimony being given by her sister, Mrs. Mary Gallagher, of 15 Mount Hood rd., Brighton.

On Feb. 13, last, the same judge, Joseph R. McCool, granted a divorce to Mrs. Gallagher after Mrs. McCarthy had testified for her.

Mrs. McCarthy, who charged cruel and abusive treatment, testified her husband was drunk twice a week, had struck her numerous times, and had used profane language in front of their two children.

She said that on Jan. 24, 1930 her husband threatened to cut her with a knife if she left him.

Once knocked down by her husband, she testified, she was driven to the hospital, where she was kept for several days. She said she was driven to the hospital, where she was kept for several days.

Atty. Maurice Pallas asked if she had left McCarthy before, and the witness replied she had done so many times on account of other women and drinking.

She told of an incident at three home in Chestnut Hill ave., Brighton, when her husband, propped her down in the presence of a girl friend, dialing one of her teeth. McCarthy then put her foot on her face, she said.

Mrs. Gallagher testified to seeing McCarthy drunk, and also said she had seen him strike his wife.

Salvage Asked for Rescue of Trawler

The National Fish Co. Ltd., today filed in federal court a petition asking "a liberal salvage award" for towing the disabled steam trawler White Cap, sinking off Cape Cod, in a place of safety.

According to the petition, the White Cap, valued at $30,000 and carrying a cargo worth more than $100,00, flew a distress signal on April 26, and the National Fish Company's trawler, St. Culbert, took the disabled craft in tow.

The St. Culbert, the petition, said, towed the White Cap toward Hatteras, N. C., a motor tour throughout that section was part of their trip.

SEES NO NEED OF ANY FURTHER PUNISHMENT

Junior High School Student Vanished With Boy, 18, on Wednesday

Somewhere in New England or New York State the path of romance was being traversed today by a 14-year-old Lynn girl and her 18-year-old sweet heart—while at home the girl's mama averred it "will be punishment enough for them when I refuse to try to annul the marriage."

It is only belief that far on the part of Mrs. Henry P. Call of Shaw st., Lynn, the girl's mother, that the couple have married during their flight, but that belief is firm.

The girl, Helen Call, student at the Eastern Junior High School, and her sweetheart, John (known) Angust of Cypress st., Lynn, vanished on Wednesday after he had drawn $137 from a bank.

"If they are married when they return," said Mrs. Call, "I don't think I will try to have it annulled. That ought to be fit enough punishment for them."

"I don't think John had more than $200 with him when they left, but I am not sure."

"They have been going together since Christmas and I used to all the time they play together in my house here and go to the movies together."

A short time ago the boy's mother objected to the close friendship because they were not old enough, but I guess they have been meeting on the quiet since then."

Helen was in love with John all right—I know, the kind of love that sometimes prevented her from eating and sleeping—the money kind."

"Perhaps it's just as well that they do marry."

ELY IS ASKED TO OUST FINANCE COMMISSION

Real Estate Association Says Board Neglects Taxpayers' Interests

Demand for removal of the Boston Finance Commission, because of laxity and constant failure in their duty toward Boston taxpayers, was made today on Lancaster. By the directors of the Massachusetts Real Estate Owners' Association.

In a letter to the Governor, the directors charged that the Finance Commission "brings idly by while legislation is forced on the city of Boston costing millions and for which the taxpayers will be paying for generations to come."

"This is an unnecessary expenditure of the people's money," said the letter, "put over on the plea that it would help the unemployed situation."

"There has been practically no relief, however, for the unemployed through this project."

"Let them be new deal. Remove the present Finance Commission and put in instead one that will function before the money is spent, and before the city of Boston is in a position where it cannot meet its obligations."

"LIKE OLD FITZ I CHOP 'EM DOWN TO MY SIZE," SAYS MICKEY

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Little Uns Off Won. ↑ McCoy and Choyanski.
Fitz and Carpenter. ↓ Ryan and Langford.
Walcott and Ketchel. ↓ All Ignored Weight.

Look What Weight Dempsey Gave to Willard!

A good big man, you all hear said, always will whip the smaller.
But in behalf of the little guy we're putting up this boiler.
The bigger they are the harder they fall—a holding beats the setter.
A good big man can't whip the small, unless he's also BETTER.

Mickey Walker's spouting Jack Sharkey 20 or so pounds has the sport fans debating the weight question hotly. Always they fall back on the old ring axiom, "A good big man will whip a good little man." Not so, Perceval, not so. A BETTER big man will whip a good little man every time. But there are plenty of instances where a good big man was beaten by a good little man. Bob Fitzsimmons, for instance, beat a whole flock of good big men. Tom Sharkey and Gus Ruhm were just as good as dead as the present-day Jack Sharkey. The old Frenchie Bob knocked the pair of 'em out in 10 minutes. If our memory is right 170-pound Ruby Robert knocked out both Tom Sharkey and Rablin, the Akron Giant, within a fortnight of each other. Don't forget Tom Sharkey was good enough to give Jim Jeffries the fastest, fiercest, most vicious 25-round bout the Big Fellow ever engaged in. Fitz, of near middleweight, knocked out Sharkey in a couple of rounds.

Speaking of Jeffries reminds us that the Big Fellow once told us the hardest punch he ever was hit was by Joe Choyanski, the light heavyweight. Joe was no bigger than Walker. On the Big Fellow's under lip you will see a jagged scar. That is Choyanski's brand. "Joe hit me so hard it drove my teeth right through my lip," explained Jeffries. "When I returned to the corner my ears ended back to pull the lip up out and away from my teeth. The punch drove me back on my heels so hard I thought I was going through the floor."

Choyanski, a light heavy, himself was knocked out by a welterweight, Joe Walcott, the Barbados Demon. Walcott was known as the Giant Killer. He made a specialty of hammering the big fellows down to his own size.

"COME DOWN TO ME, BIG BOY!"

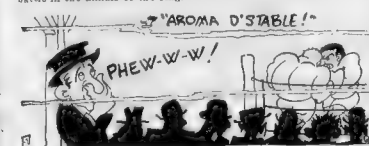

Walcott was not the only welterweight who could beat the big fellows. Right here in Chelsea, San Langford, when only a welterweight, fought 15 fast and furious rounds with the great Jack Johnson. Never after could you get the Galveston Black into the same ring with the Tar Baby.

Speaking about Walker giving away 20 pounds to Sharkey. How about Charlie Mitchell, the Englishman? Charlie weighed up more than Walker when he fought a furious draw with John L. Sullivan in Chantilly, France. Charlie Mitchell, no bigger than Walker, whipped a flock of good big men. How about Kid McCoy and Tommy Ryan, who beat big fellows galore?

James J. Corbett, when he dethroned the great John L. Sullivan, weighed less than 160 pounds. Jack Dempsey scaled no more than 160 when he leveled down the giant 265-pound Jess Willard, the Tall Pine of the Pettawatomie, in the sun-baked arena at Maunabo Bay. Dempsey was at his best around 180. At 166 pounds, when he first came East, we saw him beat the giant Andre Anderson in one of the fiercest 10-round slugfests matches we ever have seen.

The original Jack Dempsey, the Nonpareil, was little more than a knocker out across of heavyweights. Look how Georges Carpentier, when a cross between a middleweight and a light heavy, raced through the ranks of European heavies. England hailed Bombardier Billy Wells as the greatest heavyweight John Bull had since Charlie Mitchell. What the little Frenchman did to Bombardier Billy was a crime!

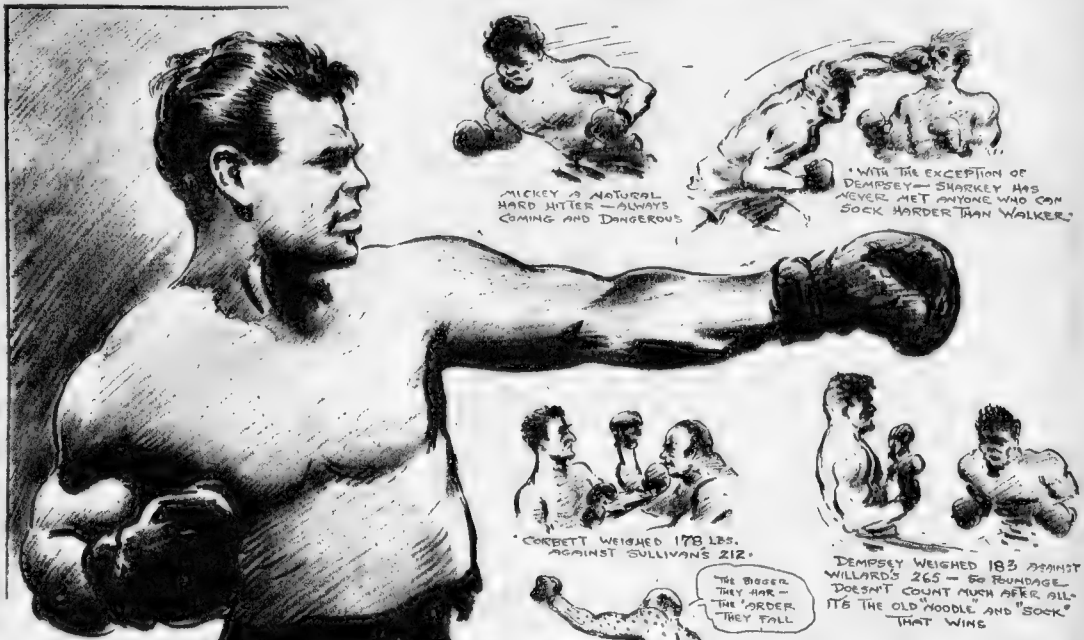

The greatest fight we ever saw was between a "little" fellow, Stanley Ketchel, and a bigger one, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien. Ketchel was a middleweight, scaled under 160 at the time, and O'Brien was around 180. The Michigan Assassin and the Philadelphia Dancing Man put up the most sensational and dramatic battle in the annals of the ring.

It took place at the old Pioneer B. O., which held forth in the old Horse Market on East 44th st., New York. The old Horse Market—the arena is with us yet. A month after—or was it before—Ketchel beat O'Brien, we saw Jim Driscoll and Abe Attell in the most widely boxing exhibition we ever saw. Those two great fights took place within a month of each other in the arena ring. Never have I seen the equal of either one since. That's two way things go.

Ketchel and O'Brien went 10 rounds, during which there was not a moment which was not fraught with excitement, not a moment in which the tide of battle did not ebb and flow, not a moment in which the spectators were not kept in a frenzy of excitement and wondering what next would happen. With six seconds to go in the final round Ketchel caught O'Brien with a swishing uppercut that lifted him in the air and turned him over in a hair's breadth. Jack landed with his neck across the edge of the sawdust box. He was knocked stone cold, but the bell saved him from the ignominy of a knockout.

Jack Sharkey outweighs Mickey Walker by 20 pounds. "A good big man will whip a good little man," they say. But Jack Sharkey not only will be a good big man to beat Mickey Walker. He will have to be a BETTER big man. We personally believe Sharkey is a BETTER big man. Maybe Smiling Mickey Walker will prove that we're all wrong, Maury—all wrong!

"MICKY WALKER HAS BIG ARMS AND SHOULDERS - WILL SHOUT 170 LBS. TO SHARKEY'S 190."

WOOD BATES; SHIELDS S WINTER

Roland Garros Stadium, Paris, July 17 (AP)—America pulled even with England today in the first two sets of the Davis Cup tennis tennis, as well when Frank Shields hammered out a victory over Fred Perry, 10-8, 6-4, 6-4, after Henry W. Austin, the British ace, had vanquished Sidney Wood, Jr., 2-6, 6-0, 6-8.

Shields' hard-smashing game, once he got under control, proved entirely too much for Perry. After a sensational first set, which the 26-year-old American pulled out after trailing 1-5 on service, the second match of the day proved mostly an anti-draw. Perry's early leads in the last two sets were short-lived under Shields' heavy cannoning.

Austin's superior generosity and control, after he dropped the first set to Wood, carried him to a decisive victory in the opening match.

The battle to determine France's challenger for the world's championship tennis will be continued tomorrow with the doubles match, in which the American team of John Van Ryn and George M. Lott, Jr., will oppose Fred Perry and George Lister.

Two singles will be played Sunday.

SAYS COLLINS

By JOE CASEMAN

"That young man is looking better every day. I may start him in a game before long."

It was Manager John "Shono" Collins of the Red Sox talking about his new collegiate infielder, Bill McWilliams of Chicago.

"He showed me so much on the very afternoon he came out to apply for a job that I signed him on the spot," Collins said. "He has shown some improvement."

"I started this season with McWilliams on the bench. He came back on the bench. He came back on the bench. He came back on the bench."

McWilliams joined the Sox unheralded and untried. Pat Monahan, one of Bob Quinn's scouts, saw him play last summer and saw him play in the Red Sox's Red Sox visited the Windy City.

He did and "Shono" signed him on the spot, putting him through a brief workout.

He is a big kid, standing about 6 feet tall and weighing about 175 pounds, and he naturally sits at all of the infield positions and at the bat.

He was used twice at pinch-hitter on the road, and while he failed to connect safely the first time, he showed all the signs of being a good pitcher, according to Collins.

DIAMOND DUST

The Braves conclude a four-game series with the Red Sox in Cincinnati this afternoon. Having taken two out of the first three games, the Warriors are already certain of an even break with the Howlin' Hoosiers.

Franklin, who has won his last six starts, down to pitch this p. m., they are confident of walking off with the edge in the engagement.

Frankhouse was due to pitch the third game but Manager Bill McKechnie shifted to Bruce Cook, who is a new arrival, and that young man stepped out to blank the Reds with five scattered hits, while his mates were finding Larry Benton, an ex-brave, for three London and two center fielders and two center fielders.

Those Chicago Cubs are traveling on high right now. They are in second place as a result of making it a row over the Giants, by a score of 5 to 2, and a game back of the Champion Cardinals, who blanked the Dodgers, 5 to 0, for their second victory in three starts since the Brooklyn entry.

"Rik" Ferrell, first-string catcher of the Browns and a brother of Wes Ferrell, Cleveland's mound ace, broke his hand while tazing John Fickert, of the Sox, out at the plate in the first game of Wednesday's doubleheader. He has been sent back to St. Louis and it is expected that he will be out of the game for some time.

Natlie Tommy Connelly, who recently retired from active duty in the United States Army, is now in service to become supervisor of the American League's 161 ballparks. Connelly, 35, is a native of Chicago and has been in the game for 15 years.

"Why, says Tommy in that easy-going, laid-back way, "I broke in as an umpire, that day I was in the game for 15 years."

Rain killed whatever chance the Senators had of gaining on the league-leading Athletics yesterday. The second-place Senators were robbed by a rainstorm that kept them from playing.

The White Sox, but after they had won the game, 5 to 4, a shower came along to halt the contest, and as the clouds whipped the Tigers into the Capital entry is still trailing by seven full games.

Gloss-Richelson Win

O. Gloss and M. Richelson advanced to the semifinal round of the men's tennis tournament under the auspices of the Boston park department at Franklin field yesterday by winning their matches to the first four round.

The semi-finals will be held today and the finals are scheduled for tomorrow.

Fakers Prevented From Operating on U. S. Air Channels

Every indication at present points to "rackets" being barred from the air waves forever. There have been a number of vigorous efforts made to pollute otherwise pure ether with scurrilous ideas and questionable radio exploits, each being tabooed by both NBC and CBS.

Among the tricksters who have tried vainly to get an earhold on listeners is the "fortune teller." Of all the novelties crowding atmospheric channels there are no bogus mind readers—and there never will be. Meritt Aylesworth, NBC head man, and William Paley, big boss at Columbia, have very definite rules laid down on that score. Men of their caliber would.

Not very long ago there was an all-knowing seer, whose claims concerning his great powers were forcibly and persistently voiced upon NBC officials. This particular oracle went so far as to voice threats, indicating he would carry his message before the public through newspapers, and thereby force radio rajahs to recognize his super-human talents.

As yet the crystal gazer, in question has failed in his attempts to influence newspapers, or any other agency serving public interests. Not has he convinced microphone moguls that his prowess is anything that ear cuppers cannot get along quite well without. So it goes.

Gradually Found Out . . .

In certain municipalities over the country there have been characters of the kind who prey upon unsuspecting radio fans with amazing success. By inviting inquiries, questions and requests, they have been able to get a good many of the unsuspecting have been secured by bogus mind readers. Having thus used broadcasting to compile a worthwhile sucker list, the game gets under way. Complaints received by stations weeks later reveal that sizeable sums have been paid for "private services rendered" and "individual readings."

Right at present, however, Johnny Johnston, big right hand of Mr. Aylesworth at NBC, is keeping officials stations properly informed. Also, the day is done for fakers on the air. In fact, their day has never even been permitted to dawn.

This Ear and That Air

Whether or not Kate Smith (WAAB at 7 night) sings too slowly is causing an influx of much fan mail. Everyone concedes the appeal and quality of her voice. . . Vincent Lopez is having a difficult time guarding the secret that he is neared. . . Eddie Cochran, Boston boy now with CBS in New York, is taking on all work they'll give him. . . Frank Mahler, accompanist for Adrian O'Brien, another Boston radio star at the networks, sticks close to Adrian night and day. . . Rudy Vallee did not intend that his marriage should be known. . . For professional reasons. . . NBO guarded the story closely also. . . But these newspaper boys will not be denied their good stories. . . WFG, at Atlantic City, is visited by more people than any other radio station in the world. . . One of the real thrills there is shaking hands with the boss, a topping fellow named Spence. . . It's a pleasure to watch him pick up a microphone down into the sea and pick up what the wild waves are saying. . . Even if one cannot understand their language.

On the Air

Daytime programs tomorrow show promise of eclipsing the evening offerings. There will be true long distance programs, including having found around the world, and talk shows for the evening. WEEI will carry their words which will be short-waved to Australia, and then to London, south and west. And just to make the affair a little more dramatic, Wing Commander Charles Kingford-Smith will report via short wave from St. Paul, in Africa. At 10-45 King George will speak from London and WAC will broadcast from London. WAC will broadcast from London. WAC will broadcast from London.

HUNDREDS AID PORT PLAN

EDUCATE the New England Public and Manufacturers to be

LOYAL in supporting this valuable venture

Left them by their Representatives

It is a shame to assign to a foreign port

PLACING his dependent on a Boston Port for export and not elsewhere, IS HIS DUTY!

EVERY steamship line in the world agrees that our harbor facilities are fine;

REGARDLESS of this, however, we cannot expect them to operate their best boats to and from here

REGULARLY, for it would mean a loss to them unless increased traffic should warrant such service.

YET the Native Boatman who goes to New York for business should not let this increase by sailing

from HIS OWN HOME TOWN!

STOCKS CLOSE
MIXED; RAILS ARE HIGHER

New York, July 17—The stock market in Wall St. today pushed up rather strongly for a time in the morning, and again in the afternoon, but each upturn was followed by a reaction.

The close was irregularly higher, with rails a strong spot. Trading was extremely dull, sales falling well under 1,500,000 shares.

RAILS HAVE RISE

Domestic bonds were also irregularly higher, but an upturn in the foreign issues was short-lived. Foreign exchanges took on a semblance of stability, but sterling was under pressure again after mid-

The Reichsbank's weekly statement, for the period ending July 13, bore striking testimony to the strain upon its resources. It showed a loss of some $75,000,000 in foreign exchange and gold for the week, and reduction of the reserve

The cutting of the legal reserve from 40 to 30 per cent, therefore, does not leave any large margin of protection. It is understood, however, that with the drastic measures taken to check the flight of capital, the bank has been graduly accumulating foreign exchange, and strengthening its position.

Failure of negotiations for renewal of the international nitrate sales cartel was reflected, in a sharp reduction in prices of sulphate of ammonia, and cuts in other chemicals were expected. Some selling appeared in Allied chemical stock as a result.

It was reported in the copper trade that offerings of metal at 4 cents had virtually disappeared, leaving a flat price of 5 cents. Little immediate prospect of a sustained rise in the red metal was seen, however, barring a successful curtailment of production.

The weekly mercantile reviews reiterated remarks about midsummer quiet. Retail trade, however, was believed to be holding about equal to a year ago.

News Item—

CHICAGO—Councilman Toman's ordinance restricting the use of white walking sticks in blind or partially blind persons was passed by city council yesterday. By means of the cane the blind will be identified by motorists and pedestrians.

All the others should be forced, by ordinance, to carry red walking sticks so they will be identified by motorists and knocked down.

Why not pass an ordinance requiring gangsters to carry illuminated walking sticks for the convenience of machine gunners?

SCIENCE AND INVENTION

Our Social Service Bureau now has on hand a large supply of these rainbow eye-glasses for the use of shoppe fronts. Worn by such persons, they make all visuals appear to be beautiful. tinted in his eyes, general old roses and lavender, and give the shoppe fronts a chance to stop worrying about other schemes and try producing something to eat.
